BRIGHT NEW CANVASSES AT ART LEAGUE ROOMS

HONOLULU ARTISTS ARE DOING
BETTER WORK THIS YEAR
THAN EVER BEFORE.

The Subjects Treated Are Largely
Local and Give the Painters Wide
Latitude to Display Their Skill
With Brilliant Colors.

The sixty odd canvasses that adorn the walls of the rooms of the Kiloana Art League in the Progress block promise a popular exhibition. The work that has been hung for the annual exhibition which begins this week is the best, as a whole, that has been shown in Honolulu. There are a few art rooms in the larger cities, that in a collection of a like nature, show a higher average of excellence or more points of striking individuality than may be seen at the Kiloana Art League.

There are not many new names on the list of exhibitors, but in the paintings displayed, improvement over previous work is quite noticeable. Honolulu devotees of the brush and pastel are getting a better hold of themselves and have made better use of the incomparable subject matter that is so abundant here. The exhibition would attract the attention of artists anywhere. Visitors at the art rooms will be confronted with a satisfactory variety. Still life pieces, with all the manifold tints of Hawaiian flowers, faithfully executed; marines, showing the moods of the sea which ever impends these islands; sunsets, nowhere so rich as across some wave washed rock through piles of tropical clouds hanging close to the sea; quaint bits of Hawaiian landscape; splendid portraits; patches of the earth, where sea and land peacefully meet; Mauna Loa, the cauldron of fire and lava—these all may be seen as they appear to the eyes of artists.

D. Howard Hitchcock and H. M. Mott-Smith have the largest exhibits. Their canvasses are better this year than ever. The large canvass by Mott-Smith entitled "Sad News" is the most conspicuous work on the walls. It was shown in the Paris salon last year, where it received commendable treatment.

Mr. Mott-Smith is also represented by a striking portrait of the late Chief Justice Judd. In these two canvasses this artist shows his partiality for strong colors and contrasts which are so effective in his sunsets and other pictures. He shows three or four sunsets as observed at Waianae. These are rich and strong in color and are good examples of the difference between the observation of the artist and the observation of the common herd. Strength and virility are stamped on all of Mott-Smith's canvasses.

D. Howard Hitchcock shows a new volcano picture. It is something of a disappointment to most of those who have become admirers of this artist's work. But in the judgment of Mr. Hitchcock it is his best volcano. It is not so startling in fine effects and has not the superficial flash that wins the attention of the crowd. The picture portrays the floor of the crater of Mauna Loa and shows the looming cliffs that encircle it. It suggests inferno and gives forth a brimstone odor. It tells a truthful volcano story. Mr. Hitchcock does not deal entirely with fire and lava. On the contrary, his canvasses show him to be a lover of the soft, sweet aspects of nature and a worshiper of the sea.

Mrs. E. Pond exhibits a canvass with the title "A Path Through the Wood." It is a delightful gem and shows the influence of Keith, the California artist under whom she studied.

Mrs. Kelley exhibits a water color production of a blooming native ginger plant. Lau Sheong, a Chinese boy, has several paintings at this exhibition. His work shows some very good qualities. He is one of a very few Chinese who have adopted Western methods.

Mrs. Rothwell shows two pieces of work. One is an attractive portrayal of flowers called "Nature's Profusion."

Helen V. Johnson exhibits a tone study showed a field with ponds and trees. This piece is a fine study in perspective, the different planes being well brought out.

Rebecca Hall Thompson appears for the first time as an exhibitor with a still life study entitled "Mangoes."

Miss Maloney has a noticeable canvass showing a couple of coconut trees in the foreground, standing out against a luminous sky.

Kate More Wells exhibits a study of a woman's head. The flesh tones are pure and are wrought in an exceedingly high key. A dark background makes this piece very effective.

Sarah H. R. Smith is represented by a head portrait which gives the impression that it is an excellent likeness.

Walter Pinkham exhibits an architectural study. The landscape tones are harmonious and suggest that the author's energies would be better devoted to water color sketches.

Wanted a Sunday Shirt.
Henry Kehaula was arrested last night on the charge of larceny in the second degree. He went into the store of Sing Lung on Nuuanu street, slipped a $1 shirt under his arm and started to walk out. The sharp-eyed Chinaman saw the trick and called for a policeman. Officer Atanasi responded and locked Kehaula up.

Broken Neck Not Fatal.
John McQuade, a 19-year old lad of Washington City, had his neck broken recently in a game of foot ball. The injury was not fatal, the neck having been placed in a plaster cast. There was no displacement.

Morgan Returned to the Senate.

MONTGOMERY (Ala.), November 15.—The joint caucus of the Democrats of both Houses of the Alabama Legislature to-night unanimously nominated J. T. Morgan as United States Senator. No other name was presented. Senator Morgan was called before the meeting and thanked the members for re-election. The ten opposition members of the Legislature in separate caucus pledged their votes to Morgan.
